Habits and History of the Carp.

By Rev. H. H. Sneed.

This industry which but a few years ago was almost unknown in our country has assumed proportions of late of character which bids fair to work a revolution in our rural districts. The pig which heretofore has been the stand-by of our farmers will give place in all probability to the carp, which can be much more cheaply and with much less trouble made to supply their tables. This variety of fish has been largely distributed all over our country by the United States Fish Commission at Washington, aided by the Commissioners of the different States. In Tennessee were distributed in 1881, 4,682 young carp, mostly in lots of 20. Ponds have been constructed and reading matter on the history and habits of the carp, the proper construction of ponds secured by those interested in this culture, and in the next three or four years we may look for abundant supplies of this fish in almost every neighborhood.

The carp, cyprinus carpio, of the family cyprinidae, was in all probability, says Hessol, introduced into Europe from Central Asia, and its culture in middle and southern Europe can be traced as early as the 13th century.

There are three varieties of carp. The scale carp, or common carp; the mirror carp, so named from the large scales which run along the body in three or four rows, and the leather carp, which has few or no scales, but a thick, soft skin. It is a question which is the best variety. The scale carp in some parts of Germany is considered superior to the other varieties, while the mirror carp or the leather carp are preferred in other localities.

The carp is partial to waters which have not too strong a current and even thrive in stagnant water, but we should not infer from this that stagnant water is the best place for them, or that fish which are partial to such water is not a good fish, for such is not the case with the carp. A muddy loam for bottom of pond is better suited for them. They feed on vegetable food and upon worms and the larvae of aquatic plants, and will not refuse the offal of the kitchen, slaughter house or the brewery. In winter they sink into deep water and burrow in the mud, and remain until spring without taking a particle of food. And strange to say, they do not lose anything in weight during this period.
The carp does not increase in size during the winter months. The growing season is from May to September, and culturists consider May the most important month of the whole year for growth.

The spawning season commences generally in May—in warmer waters in April and continues in some localities as late as July. The earlier the season begins, the earlier it ends.

One of the striking features about the carp is the number of eggs contained in the ovaries of a single fish, 400,000 or 500, 000 not being a large estimate.

The eggs of the carp are adhesive, and are generally dropped near the edge of the pond and fasten to some aquatic plant, or a stone, or brushwood. Sometimes it is advisable to place the boughs and branches of trees, or small brush, around the edge of the pond out in the shallow water, to which the eggs may adhere. Water-grass growing on the edge of ponds answers the same purpose. The female carp is usually accompanied by three or more male carp, and as from 400 to 500 eggs are dropped at a time, they are at once impregnated by the milt.

Days and even weeks are required before the ovaries are emptied. Eggs which have nothing to cling to are said to perish.

As early as the fifth or sixth day, the eyes of the young may be seen, and toward the twelfth or latest, sixteenth breaks through its envelope. In from three to five days it absorbs the yolk and seeks its food. It is a rapid grower where the conditions are favorable, growing much more rapidly in warm weather than in cold. In rivers and lakes it grows larger than when more closely confined. In three years it will reach the weight of two and a half pounds, according to the warmth of climate.

They live to a great age and grow very large. They have been known to reach the age of one hundred and forty years.
They attain the weight of thirty and forty pounds and have been known to weigh ninety pounds. These, of course are rare instances.

The climate of Tennessee, the South Atlantic and Gulf States, are peculiarly suited to this fish. There should no time be lost in stocking our rivers and lakes, and to build ponds and domesticate the carp.
Every farmer should have his fish pond, well stocked, and in a few years we should have all the fish necessary for our use.

There are persons who question the qualities of the carp as a table fish; but it is asserted upon the best authority that their is no finer variety for food. Perhaps what has created doubt about the good quality of the carp is the fact that there is an inferior carp which is not fit for food.
There is a common carp, very inferior in quality, in our river the Tennessee; and Prof. Hessel says such are found also in Germany.

Care should be taken to have ponds as free as possible from other varieties of fish, as the carp thrives better alone, and so constructed that dams will not be broken by high water. They do not thrive well in ponds with rocky bottoms.

ABOUT BONNETS.

Something in Reference to the "Latest Agony" in Millinery.

An elegant bonnet, with straw and gold beads on crown, has large satin bow over front, with a wreath of cream, pink tinged roses beneath and old gold strings. An exceedingly odd bonnet has ties of terra cotta lace, the foundation being of mahogany brown straw, with two rows of terra cotta straw lace let in around the crown.
Around the brim is a wreath of terra cotta and mahogany brown leaves, while plumes in the same color fall over back and sides.
A becoming little affair is of satin straw faced with pink crepe; two plumes are passed around crown and meet in front.
A large double loop bow, with handsome pearl and gold beaded pins adorn the back of this hat. Rather odd is a bonnet in drab straw with crown trimming of green velvet and long shaded green plumes in what is now called meadow green.

Most unique is a crepe bonnet embroidered in green and gold, the front garnished with folds of crepe, large clusters of green and yellow flowers and cream aigrette, and quite as pretty is a bonnet with crown and strings formed of point mores-que lace over satin, the brim lined with purple velvet, and bordered with three wreaths of purple and golden pansies; on the side is a finish of cream roses and buds, heliotropes and very large field violets.

THE POKE BONNET.

An English straw bonnet in poke shape, garnet in coloring, has loop bows in front of very wide garnet ribbon, passing around steep crown, with finish of long loops and ends. The brim is surrounded by variegated or shaded from creath to canary, and on to garnet double pinks and gold-dusted garnet heliotropes. The brim is lined with garnet and garnished with revers of Oriental lace, ornaments in cut and illuminated steel. In the front over-crown are cluster of feathers, which pass over sides from under jabot of lace, which also forms the strings.

A NEW electric lamp has appeared in Paris, which is called "sunlight," on account of its mellow lustre. The light is formed by inserting two carbons in holes bored into a block of marble in such a manner that the points of the carbons are separated by a thin partition of the marble. An electric current is passed through the carbons, and in traversing the shell of marble causes it to become white hot, emitting a most agreeable light.

Neal and Craft.

The case of Neal and Craft the Ashland murderers which has been before the Court of Appeals for a week or more past has not yet been decided. What the result will be is thus foreshadowed by a correspondent of the Catlettsburg Democrat who writes from Frankfort.

Mr. Zach. Smith, of Lexington, is here to appear for them. The impression here is that the Court of Appeals will reverse the case vs. Neal and Craft. These conclusions are drawn from intimation thrown out by the Court during the argument of the case to-day. One member of the Court said he was apposed to affirming the finding of a jury inflicting the death penalty where the feeling against the prisoners in the community where they were tried was such as to require the presence of soldiers to protect them from mob violence. The decision in the case will not be rendered for a few days, but I am satisfied the result will be a reversal.

A Reformer's Opinion Concerning Mixed Schools.

From the Maysville Republican.

Though the public schools of Kentucky are legally open to white and black children the colored people show no disposition to take advantage of that circumstance to force themselves into the schools from which they have heretofore been excluded. They have more sense and more forbearance than their Bourbon neighbors. They know that such action on their part would stir up bad blood and result in breaking up entirely the public schools of the State. They, therefore, ask for that which they have a right to take.

If a colored child were to make application for admission to one of the schools now set apart for white children, and if the trustees refused to admit the child, and if suit were brought against the trustees, and if they were made to pay a good round sum for so excluding the child, and if, after all, the child would be admitted, what would be the effect? Would not the public school system be broke up and wouldn't the colored children get all the benefit of the school fund? And who would be responsible? The Democratic Legislature is responsible to-day for that state of affairs which makes mixed schools the only legal schools in Kentucky. This is true.

Patented February 15, 1881.

Indispensable to Merchants Shippers And Producers.

THE CHEAPEST THE BEST. THE outside frame of this carrier contains five trays, held in place by fasteners at end of case, as seen in cut. These Trays are constructed in reversible halves. The above cut shows one whole tray filled ready to be placed in case, each egg resting in its cardboard socket in such a manner as to be readily counted, candled, or transferred from tray to tray, or case to case, without rehandling.

For cold storage this case will store 60 dozen with racks made to receive the half trays, hence this is the cheapest storage case manufactured, saving largely in space.

The manner of holding the eggs on end prevents oscillation, addling, or breakage, and adds greatly to their freshness when carried long in storage. Size of 30 dozen No. 1 cases 25x12x14, weighs 20 pounds.

THE Lexington Transcript say:

An adoption by charitable strangers of the child born of the liaison en famille, mentioned by the Transcript some weeks ago, may result in its growth, under a changed name, into a useful member of society notwithstanding the bar sinister, which is no fault of the beautiful baby. It is to be hoped the little one will, in after years, never discover the outre character of its origin. For the convenience of all parties concerned, and the future good of the "little encumbrance," this is perhaps the best disposition that could have been made of it.

The Trial Of Mrs. Lewis.

The Manchester Signal in noticing the examination of Mrs. James Lewis on the charge of murdering her husband, some weeks ago, says:

The affidavit charged willful and premeditated murder. Thirteen witnesses were examined on Saturday for the prosecution, and not a single iota of evidence was produced to prove that the defendant committed the deed. There was strong evidence, however, that the parties did not live peaceably together, and that, at times, there was some very hard language used by both. There was also evidence that Mrs. Lewis must be a very hard hearted and unfeeling woman, she having disposed of two children in a mysterious way, and if taken before the court on that kind of a charge, she might get to serve a term in the State prison. Several witnesses testified to the fact that she had admitted the truth of the above assertion in their presence, and that she had said she would do so again.

By the preliminary court she stands acquitted but in the minds of the people, there rests a suspicion that some other hand held the revolver when the fatal shot was fired, than that of James S. Lewis.

We have no opinion of our own to offer. The evidence was not against the woman and by the law she is clear. If it was a murder, "murder will out."

The names of all the witnesses were sent to the grand jury, and it is thought an indictment will be found, and a deeper and more searching investigation had. If such be the case, we may get more light on the subject. If anybody is guilty we hope the guilty wretch will be brought to justice, and if he killed himself, no one will be hurt by such an investigation. 'Great is the mystery' that surrounds this case, and we do hope that some light may be had one way or another.

Maysville Races.

The Yeoman says: The Trotting Association at Maysville will hold its first spring meeting May 16, 17, 18 and 19; two purses each day, amounting in the aggregate to $6,400. Their rings accommodate every class of horses from 2:17 to 2:50. The meeting will open with a ten-mile running race for $1000 a side between Miss Nellie Burke, of Omaha, Nebraska, who claims the championship as a female rider, and Miss Lillian Devere, of San Francisco. The magnificent mile track over which these heats will be made is said to be the finest mile track in the West, and those of our citizens who attended the fair there last fall are prolific in their praises of the management. The entries will close on Monday, May 1st, and those of our readers who desire to try their blooded animals will find this a golden opportunity. Maysville always gives a hearty welcome and good treatment.

J. HENRY PECOR,

BURDETT'S BABY.

Why He Won't Have It Bothered With Grammar.

Burlington Hawkeye.

Time flies, and the boy is learning to talk so that other people can understand him.

"If you would let me have him for about one month," said the pleasant voiced and pleasant faced school-mistress who came down here from up river last week, "I could break him of that careless habit of speaking."

Just because the boy had asked his stern dark-browed father:

"Poppuls, whurs is mises fiffin pole you peakin' mama um day?"

Which by interpretation is, as the pleasant voiced school-mistress would have taught him to say:

"Father, where is my fishing-rod of which you were speaking to my mother, with reference to purchasing it for me at some time in the indefinite future?"

And her little serene highness shook her head and said no; he was losing his baby talk, and learning to speak English too rapidly as it was. The pleasant face of the school-mistress wrinkled up into an interrogation point.

"School-mistress," the jester said, "on all matters of education, your shapely head is not hilly; it is as level as a new-mown lawn, but you don't want to teach the baby grammar, and you don't want him to speak good English. You want him to be a baby and you want to encourage him to indulge in baby talk. In the years to come when the pudgy little fists will dig great tears out of the blue eyes, because the boy can't remember in just what points there should and must be exact harmony between the verb and the subject; when he is confident that he will die before he can remember how many fellows besides 'ad, ante, con, in or inter, are followed by the accusative; when he knows the world will stand still for just two hours after school if he can't recall that all terminations in something or other take the what you may call it after some kind of things; when he is trusting and has so much confidence in Mr. Davies that he is not only willing but anxious to accept his statement that the sum of the three angles of a triangle is equal to two right angles, without going to the board to prove his truthfulness by demonstration; along in those days the memory of his baby talk will come back to us like sweet music. He will have trouble enough with the English language and all the appurtenances thereunto apertaining by and by."

"No," he responded, in answer to a silent inquiry of the pleasant faced school-mistress, "he does not know his alphabet, thank heaven, and he shall not be bothered with it. Yes, he has alphabet blocks, and knows all the letters on them and many preposterous stories about the pictures. Oh, yes, he can count; hear him now counting the pebbles he brought home from the beach, 'one, free, seven, free, ten, free, five, seven, free; certainly he can count, by a system of his own, too, which is more than most people have."

"Don't make a prig of the baby, school-mistress. From the day on which they are six years old they must understand school system of the State, begin to be straight and behave properly and speak correctly, and from that time until the grave hides them they live and speak and act, verbally speaking, they be and do, suffer under social and educational surveillance. And I claim that at least six years of the life of a man or woman should be free; free as the air; free to talk as the book runs, with untrammelled musical prattle and babble. Why, here, a few weeks ago, came a melancholy-looking child, about four years old and in my presence and hearing, pointed to me, and said to his mother,

"Ma'am, of whom is that gentleman speaking?"

"Poor little prig? My heart bled for him. That afternoon I took the boy down by the target, and taught him to say, 'Mama, what is dat man speakin' you about?' and reconstructed his general grammar on the same easy basis, and—look me in the eye—if that boy didn't tan up like a young Indian in two days, and he gained seven pounds in three weeks.

"You see," the jester concluded, in an apologetic tone, for he had done an unusual amount of preaching that day, "you see, we haven't a very broad experience in training children, we have only one chick to chuck over and scratch for, but we're bound he shan't go to school until he's through being a baby, and we know, school-mistress, that he's the happiest baby that ever mangled grammar."
